

"Trillions for the Military: Will That Make Us Secure?"

Kathy Kelly, Voices for Creative Nonviolence

Thursday, November 9 at 7 PM

Anderson Auditorium in Predolin Center, Edgewood College

1000 Edgewood College Drive, Madison, WI 53711

Kathy Kelly, a global activist for peace, is one of the founding members of Voices in the Wilderness, and currently a co-coordinator of Voices for Creative Nonviolence (www.vcnv.org) Believing that "where you stand determines what you see," Voices activists have stood alongside people in war zones and helped educate U.S. people about the terrible consequences of U.S. wars. As a guest of the Afghan Peace Volunteers, she has frequently visited Kabul. Experiences there and in other war zones have led her to speak and write about the futility of U.S. militarism and the potential for nonviolent resistance to war and injustice.

Planned by Ecumenical Peace Working Group
Hosted by Edgewood College COR General Education Program
For more information, contact Maureen McDonnell, OP, at mowisdom@gmail.com